Petr Suchánek was appointed as Vice President for International Development at CENTURY 21. He thus becomes member of senior management of the largest world real estate network. “It is definitely transfer of the year in the real estate world. Petr will be only the second European in the forty-year history of CENTURY 21 heading to such a senior position within the worldwide network,” Aleš Mazgaj, CEO of CENTURY 21 Česká republika, said. According to him, Petr Suchánek was chosen for his work success at home where he, together with his team, succeeded in selling 64 CENTURY 21 licences in the Czech market within two years. As Vice President for International Development, Petr Suchánek will now be in charge of selling master licences worldwide, he will be responsible for CENTURY 21 brand entry into new markets.

Petr Suchánek (31) graduated from Technical University of Ostrava where he earned master´s degree. During his studies he worked as sales manager at Cobra Group in New Zealand and after returning to the Czech Republic, he worked at managerial positions of insurance company ING. Since 2008 he has worked at CENTURY 21 Česká republika as sales director. Petr Suchánek used to be a professional ice hockey player. He played in the Czech top hockey league for Opava and Havířov and later he also played in the U.S. and Canada.
