

JLLS introducing real estate application of iPhone

Author: SF / pb | Published: 19.04.2011

Jones Lang LaSalle (JLLS) has introduced an iPhone application, allowing users to gain easy access to global surveys of the real estate market, to information on trends in sustainability or to a series of social media. In addition, most Jones Lang LaSalle surveys have been made available in this way without registration or login. The application is free to download from the App Store. “Our employees, clients and potential clients who are seeking leading research and expertise in commercial real estate market, or those who need to find a specialist of Jones Lang LaSalle on their market can now obtain the required information within seconds, whether they are in the office or on the road,” says Kevin Turpin, Head of Research for Central and Eastern Europe at Jones Lang LaSalle. In recent years JLLS expanded its communication with customers on social networks such as LinkedIn, Facebook, YouTube and Twitter, which is supplemented by information from the company website and its press centre.”

---

19.04.2011 09:46, SF / pb